

Dementia research... Are you involved or interested in becoming involved?

Please join us for a free workshop—3rd October

Following on from our first very successful workshop held in York in July, we are pleased to bring to you the second event in this series which will focus on using innovative ways to engage people with dementia in research, whilst maintaining ethical practice.

In the morning we are inviting researchers to share their experience of involving people with dementia in their research. If you would like to participate in this part of the event, please visit our website for further details.

In the afternoon session, we will consider how we can promote ethical practice in dementia research, prompted by the views and experience of experts.

So save the date Friday 3rd October 2014 in York and please share this information with others who might be interested.
